

Neutron stars can spin at a rate of 600 rotations per second. These remnants of massive stars that have exploded in supernovae are incredibly dense and can rotate extremely fast.